7 CITIES WHERE SIN IS LEGAL

★ Here are seven cities where sex and other forms of sin are not only legal, but are approved as major industries of the areas involved.

CASBAH Famous walled city within the city of Algiers devoted entirely to prostitutes, panders, thieves and other shady characters. Europeans who wander in to taste forbidden fruits of Araby often disappear for good. Even local police tend to steer clear of Cashah.

HAMBURG The informatic St Pauli section of the Hamburg waterfront has been a booming sev-supermarket since the war. American occupation troops stationed in Germany have filled the pockets of local prostitutes and shonkeeners. Despite protests from nationalist pressure groups anxious to discredit U.S. occupation who have been screaming that the Vankee gangsters are "demoralizing German womanhood" German women of whom there is a surplus since the war, iam

TANGIFR Tangiers is a "free port' in all senses of the word There are no restrictions on what goods or people may enter or leave, and practically no such word as illestel exists in this town. In addition to prostitution and dope industries. Tangiers, in recent years has become the clearing ground for lewd films and movies. Life in Tangiers is gay dangerous sinful and expensive.

Girls, done and smuggled tobacco are moved in and out of the Internationally controlled zone in converted World War II natrol boats with hopped up engines. Boats are not designed to evade Tangier authorities who don't care who or what comes into their harbor, but to duck customs hoats at the point of origin. Recently there has been an influx of Italian and Greek girls who come to Tangier to earn

NEVER TICKLE A BIG CAT!

"sig CATS are just like ittle cats, in some ways," save Melvin Coonty, animal trainer at the World Jungle Compound in Thousand Oaks, Calif. "But did you ever see a house-cat that wouldn't be a dangerous character to have around if it weighed 400 pounds instead of two pounds?" When Melvin talks about cats he ien't talking about any peoceful old tabbies of course but about the lions tigers, leopards, iaguars and pantbers he deals with every day at The Compound which services the Hollywood studios with jungle beasts to order.

"If a cat knows you and respects you," says Melvin, iz plays cotch-as-cotch-con with Sheba, a four-year-old leasard.

"you can play with it and rassle with it just like you would with an old tabby but look out! Sometimes those cats forget how strong they are!" Melvin's principal job is training the animals to get used to human beings and to obey instructions. It's a lot harder than getting a cat to jump through a hoop in a circus tent. "In the circus " Melvin explains, "they can use guns, and whips; but I have to train my little pussy-cats to respond to hand signals or soft-spoken voice cues." County preferred cats that are born in captivity to animals caught in the jungle. "Zoo-raised animals have been used to the presence of human beings all their lives and do not tend to be so jumny and pervous as animals caught in the jungles. They usually are healthier and better-adjusted animals, too," he states. "Actually an animal raised in the jungle can never be completely tamed, unless captured at a very early age."

A New Jersey educator, known for his frequent lectures on the subject of "selfcontrol," was arrested and charged with histany.

South African authorities frowned on the suggestion that instead of being burdened with a lot of certifications but accept the second of the control of the information tattooed on their backs: "Just imagine the trouble if a person changed address or religion. And a girl applying for a marriage license would have to bare more than her blouse to supply all datails."

On Formoss, The Society of Henpecked Husbands meekly announced that it has decided to disband because too many wives objected to husbands attending meeting.

A plaque affixed to a pillar leading to the dance floor of a London nightclub announces: "Marlene Dietrich leaned here."

A Los Angeles newspaper

A Los Angeles newspaper carried this small ad: "SIN-GLE expectant mother desires housework or bab; sitting. No bachelor considered."

A St. Paul grocer told police about the husky-voiced "woman" bandit who robbed him of $400: "He didn't have the right bulges in the right places for a woman."

When narcottes squad detectives searched a New York man's apartment at first they found no dope, but later noticed a baby bottle in a crib, its liguid red instead of white. "It's a special formula for the baby," explained the suspect, but when the cops tried to hand it to the kid, he confessed it contained 10 oz. liquid cocaine.

A Massachusetts youth decided to join the paratroops after the Navy turned him down because he refused to have his nude tattoo draped or removed.

★ EASY IS EASY and West is West, and when the twain finally met, during the U.S. occupation of Japan, Madame Butterfly was re-enacted thousands of times

Contrast this to the happy memories the average GI has of his stay in Japan. As one of the first American soldiers to take part in the occupation I had an unusual opportunity to study Japanese females (from a purely academic point of view, of course) before they underwent too much of the GI's Westernizing influence The first Japanese woman I knew was the wife of my friend Arakawa Arakawaokusan managed to be charming and at the same time self effacing, and she had that unique Japanese quality of being able to anticinate every wish Just as one's palate began to set the elightest hit furry she would appear with bottles of notent ice-cold rice-beer When the panes of hunger felt she'd suddenly matevialize with a bowl of crisp tiny prawns to eat with the beer until dinner time

When I slent over at the Arakawa's house I would find in the morning that Arakawa-okusan had taken my socks and suntans somewhere in the middle of the night washed them dried them, and ironed them to a knife-like crease With tynical Japanese feminine tact she had not asked me if I wanted these things done. sensing that I would be hesitant to put her to so much trouble. When a Japanese women does you a favor she does it in such a way that

But my biggest surprise at the Arakawa house came when I took my first bath there. Many Japanese still use little wooden tubs under which is a wood or charcoalhurning grate to heat the water in the tub. Of course they're built for Jananese neonle and a six-foot 200pounder has a little trouble squeezing into them, but it's so soothing once you're in. My surprise came when after I had succeeded in sbeehorning myself into the tub, Madame Arakway, with no more sense of impropriety than a Salvation Army lassis, came in with a perfumed washrag and ever-fumed washrag and ever-fumed washrag and ever-fumed washrag and ever-so-gently washed my back! Naturally after some time in Japan I found myself a little Nipponese sweetheart She was the most beautiful and delicate-looking girl 1 have ever known I could get pleasure out of just looking at her perfect features. She was an ornhan of 17. Her parents had been killed in the mass B-29 bombings at the end of the war. Why she didn't bate me for this, I don't know. but she gave me every courtesy that Mrs. Arakawa did. and the further pleasure of being one of the most affectionate and loval girl-friends a man could ask for. When the time finally came to leave Japan, I walked up the gang-plank backwards. watching the shore half-determined to stay. I probably would have, if it had not been for family illness at home. When I left I gave a message for my girl friend Yoshiko to my huddy Roh Kerr, and asked him to comfort her if he could Bob told me later that she listened quietly to the message he read her and then returned to her room without a word. Having been in Japan for five months, fortunately. Bob knew what to expect. He broke in on little Yoshiko just as she was about to elash how writes with a razor-blade (she didn't own a hari-kari sword) Now I'm not saying that I wish all my exgirl-friends would commit suicide when I leave them: but it's an unusual thing to find a woman today who takes love that seriously! There's only one trouble, in all this Oriental Paradise. In ten years of occupation, Japanese women have unfortunately learned the "American way." Savonara!
